While evening out numbers of constituents may be well-intentioned, the proposed reduction in numbers of councillors would be detrimental to local democracy. Representation is not always as good as it should be, especially as one party is currently very much in control. They seem to think they can foist any and all their ideas onto us. Also, with so many 'planning'/housing matters arising, existing councillors have much more to keep abreast of and deal with. Fewer councillors would struggle to cope with the extra workload. It is thoroughly ill-conceived.
