The present number should remain unchanged. District councillors know their areas, and know their people. While some minor boundary adjustments would probably be acceptable, the proposed reduction in the number of councillors will make them more remote. We already have county councillors covering larger areas. Local government should mean just that, local. Babergh and Mid-Suffolk have already proposed a merger - rejected by Babergh voters in a referendum - and this seems to be one more step along that road. I am perfectly happy with my district councillors, local men with local knowledge. Please keep it that way.
