

MODERN SLAVERY ACT STATEMENT - 2017

Introduction

This is Allport Cargo Services Limited's ("ACSL") Modern Slavery Statement in respect of slavery and human trafficking following the introduction of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 ("the Act"). ACSL fully supports the Act and is committed to tackling modern day slavery.

This statement sets out work performed and ongoing initiatives taken by ACSL to prevent modern slavery and human trafficking within its business and network.

ACSL Business

ACSL is a privately owned freight and logistics company founded in 1963 and currently employing in excess of 700 staff worldwide. The ACSL network comprises of subsidiaries, joint ventures, partners and associates.

ACSL recognises that its business model presents various risks as outlined within the Act by the use of agency and temporary staff in the UK, in addition to a worldwide partner and associate network.

Policies

ACSL has implemented and revised the following policies: -

- Code of Conduct
- Whistleblowing (includes a whistleblowing hotline that can be used by the ACSL Partner network)

Due Diligence & Audits

It is appreciated that one of ACSL's largest exposure to modern slavery is within its worldwide network. As such, third parties are subject to due diligence checks; this applies to new third parties at the onboarding stage and to existing third parties throughout the duration of the business relationship.

In order to further enhance the existing controls, audits are conducted by or on behalf of ACSL.

Ethics & Compliance Committee

An Ethics & Compliance Committee has been created by the Board, which provides oversight of ethical matters.

Risk Assessment

ACSL have assessed the risks closet to our operating basis by way of review of HR practices.

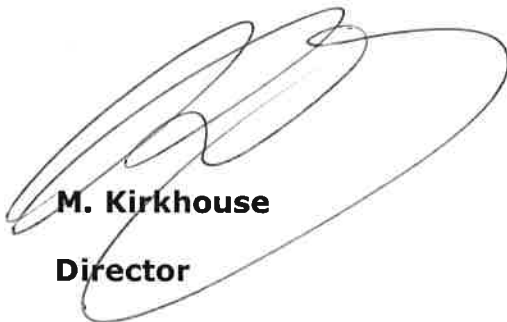

We will continue to risk assess by country and services offered/provided by our network of partners and associates and work towards mitigating, monitoring and controlling the risks identified.

ACSL will continue to raise awareness of modern slavery and human trafficking within its business and network.

Board Approval

This statement was approved by the Board of Allport Cargo Services Limited.
