

Leicestershire Police has made good progress in achieving its savings for the comprehensive spending review period

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) has today published a report on Leicestershire Police's progress in meeting the challenges of the 2010 comprehensive spending review.

A thematic report, Policing in Austerity: One Year On, found that police forces across England and Wales have risen to the financial challenge of the spending review, cutting their spending while largely maintaining the service they provide to the public; but HMIC has some concerns about whether all forces have transformed their efficiency to the extent that this can be sustained through the next three years (and into future spending reviews).

Based on the data provided by the force, HMIC found that:

- Money: Leicestershire Police needs to save £36 million between March 2011 and March 2015. By spring 2012 they had planned how to save 82% of this amount. The force will use reserves, but will have an outstanding gap still to fill.
- People: The force is planning to cut its total workforce number (i.e. police officers, police staff and police community support officers) by 460 between March 2010 and March 2015.
- 310 of these will be police officer posts; this means there will be 14% fewer officers in Leicestershire (compared with the 10% average officer reduction across England and Wales).
- The front line: By 2015, 71% of its workforce will be in frontline roles. This is lower than in most other forces.
- However, the proportion of officers in frontline roles will increase between March 2010 and March 2015 (from 86% to 88%), and so be broadly in line with most other forces.
- Crime: The force continues to drive down crime and achieved a higher than average rate of overall crime reduction between December 2010 and December 2011.
- Victim satisfaction: 87% of victims are satisfied with the overall service provided by Leicestershire Police. This is above the national figure.

HM Inspector of Constabulary for the Eastern Region, Zoe Billingham, said:

“Leicestershire Police stopped recruiting officers and staff before the announcement of the 2010 spending review. This meant it started reducing costs early on, and gave it time to plan how to address the remaining financial challenge.

“The force has put in place a comprehensive change programme to manage the reductions in its budget. As a result, it is in a good position to achieve their savings target by March 2015.

“Although Leicestershire Police is cutting a greater proportion of police officer posts than other forces, it is increasing the percentage of officers in frontline roles. This will help the force in its efforts to keep crime down and make local communities feel safe.”

8. Her Majesty’s Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) carried out an inspection of all 43 police forces in England and Wales in spring 2011, to see how they were planning to meet this financial challenge. When the results were published in July 2011 (search for ‘Valuing the Police’ on www.hmic.gov.uk), we committed to returning one year later to report on progress, and to assess whether there had been any impact on the service provided to the public.
