

South Yorkshire Police has made good progress in achieving its savings for the comprehensive spending review period.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) has today published a report on South Yorkshire Police's progress in meeting the challenges of the 2010 comprehensive spending review.

A thematic report, Policing in Austerity: One Year On, found that police forces across England and Wales have risen to the financial challenge of the spending review, cutting their spending while largely maintaining the service they provide to the public; but HMIC has some concerns about whether all forces have transformed their efficiency to the extent that this can be sustained through the next three years (and into future spending reviews).

Based on the data provided by the force, HMIC found that:

- South Yorkshire Police needs to save £43 million between March 2011 and March 2015. By spring 2012 they had planned how to save 90% of this amount.
- The force is planning to cut its total workforce number (i.e. police officers, police staff and police community support officers) by 1,010 between March 2010 and March 2015.
- 330 of these will be police officer posts; this means there will be 11% fewer officers in South Yorkshire (compared with a 10% average officer reduction across England and Wales).
- By 2015 69% of its workforce will be in frontline roles, which is a lower proportion than most other forces.
- While the proportion of officers in frontline roles will increase between March 2010 and March 2015 (from 83% to 86%), this percentage is still lower than most other forces
- Crime is falling in South Yorkshire, but more slowly than across England and Wales as a whole.
- 85% of victims in South Yorkshire were satisfied with the service from South Yorkshire Police, which is in line with the national figure.

HM Inspector of Constabulary for the Northern Region, Roger Baker, said:

“South Yorkshire Police has put in place a comprehensive change programme to manage the reductions in its budget. As a result they are in a good position to achieve their savings target by March 2015.

“The force plans to increase the proportion of its police officers dedicated to frontline policing, and it should continue to focus on this as its plans develop. This should assist in its efforts to narrow the crime performance gap between South Yorkshire and its most similar forces.”
