

Staffordshire Police has made good progress in achieving its savings for the comprehensive spending review period.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) has today published a report on Staffordshire Police's progress in meeting the challenges of the 2010 comprehensive spending review.

A thematic report, Policing in Austerity: One Year On, found that police forces across England and Wales have risen to the financial challenge of the spending review, cutting their spending while largely maintaining the service they provide to the public; but HMIC has some concerns about whether all forces have transformed their efficiency to the extent that this can be sustained through the next three years (and into future spending reviews).

Based on the data provided by the force, HMIC found that:

- Staffordshire Police needs to save £34 million between March 2011 and March 2015. By spring 2012 they had planned how to save 90% of this amount.
- The force is planning to cut its total workforce number (i.e. police officers, police staff and police community support officers) by 800 between March 2010 and March 2015.
- 400 of these will be police officer posts; this means there will be 18% fewer officers in Staffordshire (compared with a 10% average officer reduction across England and Wales).
- By 2015 75% of its workforce will be in the frontline, which is broadly in line with most other forces.
- The proportion of officers in frontline roles will increase between March 2010 and March 2015 (from 83% to 91%) This means Staffordshire Police will have a greater proportion of police officers on the front line than many other forces.
- The force continues to drive down crime, and has achieved a much higher reduction than in England and Wales as a whole (between December 2010 and December 2011).
- 89% of victims in Staffordshire were satisfied with the service they received from the force, which is higher than the national figure.

HM Inspector of Constabulary for the Western Region, Dru Sharpling, said:

"Staffordshire Police has a good history of achieving efficiencies, which has put them in a good position to address the financial challenge of the 2010 spending review.

“Although the force will reduce the size of its workforce (and this includes losing officer posts), it will increase the proportion working in frontline, crime-fighting roles. This should help the force to continue to achieve high victim satisfaction rates, while bringing down crime rates more effectively than many other forces in England and Wales.”

8. Her Majesty’s Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) carried out an inspection of all 43 police forces in England and Wales in spring 2011, to see how they were planning to meet this financial challenge. When the results were published in July 2011 (search for ‘Valuing the Police’ on www.hmic.gov.uk), we committed to returning one year later to report on progress, and to assess whether there had been any impact on the service provided to the public.
